COLLINGSWORTH GIVES UP.

He Goes to Jail, and Will Open a "Swell" Billiard Parlor.

Mr. John Collingsworth, the Ward McAllister of the Topeka sporting talent, threw up his hands in the district court today and will serve out a sentence of sixty days, $300 fine and costs.

Mr. Collingsworth had become wearied of fighting the inevitable, and arrived at the commendable conclusion that the best thing to do was to take his sentence like a man and quit. There were three counts against him for selling liquor; two of them for running a club in the old Adams house in North Topeka. To these two counts Collingsworth pleaded guilty.

Collingsworth appeared in court in a checked shirt and no coat or vest. A Journal reporter asked him:

"Are you going to make any defense?"

"You know I ain't, I'm done, I tell you. The game is declared off."

Then "Gentleman Johnny" was taken before the bar of justice to receive his sentence.

"Have you any reason why sentence should not be passed upon you?" Judge Hagen asked.

Collingsworth shook his head and winked at the court stenographer.

"It is the sentence of this court that you be confined in the county jail thirty days on each count, and pay a fine of $100 on each count, and stand committed until the fine and costs are paid."

Collingsworth took his $5 hat and joined Deputy Sheriff Dan Jones, who was waiting for him at the door. They went together to the county jail. Collingsworth will work out his sentence, pay his fine and costs, and when he gets out open up a swell billiard parlor, but do no more gambling.

It is a significant fact that the case of the police against Collingsworth, which has been set for Saturday, will never be tried, as a prisoner cannot be taken out of the county jail to be tried in the police court.

A Bald-Headed Burglar.

William Myre is an old man whose general features bear a strong resemblance to the late Jonathan Bass, the ossified man. He is like procrastination the thief of time—he stole a clock. He was tried this morning for burglary and larceny. He is the man whom Officer Capron caught on the morning of May 29th. He had broken into the O'Connell's house on the southeast corner of Crane and Monroe streets. The story of the prosecution is that Olandriff took pity on Myre because he was drunk and helpless, and offered him a place to sleep in his kitchen. Sometime during the night he broke into the other part of the house and stole an alarm clock and 65 cents in cash. Myre admits taking the articles, which are valued at $1.50, and is willing to plead guilty to petty larceny, but says he did not have to break into the house proper to take the articles, and says he would not have taken them had he not been drunk.

Foreman Tinscher, of the state printing house bindery and Bob Arnold, of Crane's bindery testified that Myre applied to them for work saying he was a binder. They were not to give him work but took up a collection among the boys' and gave him $3.75. Olandriff, the complaining witness, is also a German, and a pig-sticker at Wolff's packing house.

The jury went out at 11 o'clock.

Frank White Guilty.

The case of Frank White charged with the burglary of the First Baptist church, was concluded this morning. He with his brother and Clarence McDowell, broke in a window and stole Rev. Mr. Thomas' baptismal boots. The jury was out only fifteen minutes and returned a verdict of guilty. He will probably be sentenced next Monday. The young offender took his sentence with the same stolid indifference he has accepted innumerable other sentences in lower courts.

Another Burglary Case.

The case of Sidney Pickens, charged with the burglary of Culver & Bailey's hardware store, was commenced shortly before noon. Pickens' attorney, Charles Fensky, made a motion for a continuance and to quash the indictment, both of which motions were overruled. Pickens was associated in the theft with Con Ryan, both of whom were captured in Leavenworth with the stolen revolvers and razors in their possession.

BEER IN STREAMS

Flowed Right Under Gov. Lowellling's Feet Labor Day.

HE COULD SEE FOR HIMSELF

How the Law He is Sworn to Uphold is Violated—He Spoke Secretly Over an Underpinning of Saloons.

Governor Lowellling, who is pledged to uphold all laws, made the speech of the day at the Labor Day celebration at Kerr's park, Kansas City, Kansas. There was a big crowd present. Says the Kansas City, Kan. Gazette:

"The governor spoke from the grand stand overlooking the race track. Through the cracks between the boards on which the governor stood came loud voices and the clinking of glasses from an extensive bar room under the grandstand where seven men were busy dispensing beer to a thrifty and almost as large a throng as that which listened to the governor. His excellency, to reach his place in the grand stand, had to pass the open entrance to his bar room, which, even if the governor did not care to look that way, there came an odor that could not be mistaken. Then if the governor had wanted to find another form of diversion, he would have found also within hearing of his voice a policy wheel running full blast."

"While the governor was talking the women of the Equal Suffrage association, who had taken part in the day's celebration, appealed to Mayor Barnes to put a stop to the beer selling and gambling or they would have to leave the grounds. The mayor replied that Kerr's park was not in the corporate limits of the city and was therefore beyond his jurisdiction. He referred them to the governor with the thought that perhaps he would afford them some relief."

"It was not long before the effects of the liquor began to grow manifest. Policeman Clark came on a man who made a show of drawing a revolver when ordered not to crowd on the race track and immediately Policeman Clark found himself surrounded by a howling mob. He was rescued without damage. In another place an old man who attempted to interfere in a row was knocked senseless and kicked in the head after he was down. At another time the manager of the dancing pavilion appealed to a deputy sheriff to quell an individual who was boisterous. When the deputy ordered the individual to subside the individual 'dashed a knife' and the deputy fled."

Speaking editorially of the scenes at Kerr's park, the Gazette says:

"The Labor Day observance at Kerr's park were not of an inspiring nature. About the worst enemy of labor is beer. Under the grand stand, while we looked on, seven men were engaged in dishing out beer, and we are told that at other times there were ten so engaged. The crowd, including some women, stood up to the bar about three o'clock, and the clamor and rush were immense. Several gambling tables and some sort of a wheel were also there, to attest their interest in labor. Right overhead, with only an inch board between, stood the governor of Kansas, making a speech, in which he gave the laborer a lesson in the value of the dollar, and denounced the president for sending troops to fire on the strikers in Chicago. Labor constitutes the one, and the sixteen fellows were underneath the grand stand. Several drunken brawls were engaged in, a mob drew knives, and the women screamed and ran for the gallies. In addition to the governor, there were several deputy sheriffs and policemen standing around, observing the dignity of the alleged labor demonstration, on an occasion which should have contributed great honor to labor, the trampling under foot, laws aimed at drink and gambling."

MRS. LEASE AT HYDE PARK.

Arouses the Enthusiasm of Populists by Assailing Old Parties.

The Chicago Herald of Tuesday says: The Hyde Park Populist club held an open air meeting at Fifty-fourth street and Madison avenue last night. Mrs. Mary E. Lease was the speaker of the evening, and her address electrified the audience of 300 to a high pitch of enthusiasm. The constitution of the country, she said, had been repeatedly violated by both of the old parties until such violation had almost become a tradition. The old parties had long ago outlived their usefulness and the People's party had sprung up out of necessity. It was time for the women and preachers to take a hand in the control of the nation's affairs. Too many preachers there were who dined with the rich and preached to the poor. These were wastes who would touch the masses not alone how to die, but also that equally important lesson, how to live.

The questions of labor, land, finance and transportation, the speaker said, were demanding the attention of the country, the present party of which was a result of direct violations of the constitution.

"What do you think of George M. Pullman?" some one asked.

"He has been rapidly accumulating his wealth for a place where gold will readily melt," Mrs. Lease replied.

MORRILL'S WAR RECORD.

Two Members of His Regiment Say He Did Carry a Musket.

The statement made by Chairman Breidenbach of the Populist state central committee in a letter to James M. Jones of Seneca that Major Morrill never carried a musket, is denied by two Topeka men who served in the Seventh Kansas cavalry, Major Morrill's regiment.

Hon. James Smith, ex-secretary of state, and later private secretary to Governor Martin and Humphrey, who was lieutenant and quartermaster of this regiment, and E. Holcomb, who was a member of company C of the same regiment, say Major E. N. Morrill enlisted in 1861 and served as orderly sergeant of company C until August, 1862, when he was promoted and made major and commissary.

A DAY OF BATTLES.

Quarrels Rage Fast and Furious at the Insane Asylum.

A BULL IN A CHINA SHOP.

Dr. McCassey Frances Around All Day in His Customary Fashion Discharging Doctors and Attendants—While One Patient is Pounded With a Strap and Another Gets His Ankle Broken.

Yesterday was a red letter day at the state insane asylum. The day opened with a personal quarrel between Dr. McCassey, the superintendent, and Dr. Brothers about the care of the patients in one of the wards. Dr. McCassey gave orders which Dr. Brothers deemed it inadvisable to carry out and he told McCassey so. The superintendent then told Dr. Brothers that he might consider himself discharged, but the doctor refused to acknowledge Dr. McCassey's authority and so is still holding his position.

The assistant superintendent, Mrs. Dr. Kniberg, disagreed with the superintendent on the question of management of patients and was promptly ordered from the room. She did not go, but remained and gave the superintendent her ideas about the management of the institution. The smoke had only just cleared away when Bookkeeper Moore's turn came. The bookkeeper heard a noise in one of the wards which sounded like someone striking a patient. The noise was accompanied by screams of pain. He started out to make an investigation and found an attendant beating a patient with a strap to compel him to mop the floor. The bookkeeper at once informed the superintendent of the occurrence.

Dr. McCassey went to the ward. The attendant still held the strap in his hand, but had momentarily ceased using it. When informed by McCassey that the book keeper had reported him as beating a patient, he at once laid down the strap and promptly informed him that he was a liar. This trouble ended in words. The day was not complete, however. Dr. McCassey ended up the day's disturbances by ordering the discharge of Engineer Fitzgerald, who is sick and has been under a doctor's care for a week. He gave him no recommendation as he does the attendants who have been guilty of knocking down and abusing patients, so that when Fitzgerald gets well he can't go to Clarinda, Iowa.

Sunday evening an accident happened in the kitchen—no one seems to know just how—and one of the patients had his ankle broken. Of course no one is to blame, and the poor man's ankle will have time to heal.

An institution divided against itself can not stand, and with the incompetency of Dr. McCassey and constant dissensions among those in authority, it is difficult to see how the state's unfortunates can receive the care which should be given them.

ARE WE CHEATED

In the Adoption of the Smead System?—Kansas City Was.

Is it possible that the Topeka board of education has been cheated in the adoption of the Smead sanitary system throughout the new high school? The Kansas City school board and the board of health decided that the Smead system as in use in the high school there was not only worthless but dangerous from a sanitary standpoint, and ordered the adoption of the following resolution:

"Resolved, That inasmuch as the city board of health has condemned Smead closet system as used in the high school, that the same be discontinued and that everything connected therewith be removed."

Though the board took a long time to decide the question it was stated that there were no differences of opinion and that the resolution was adopted without a dissenting voice. Several of the members thought that the agitation against the Smead closets was without good reason, and that to make a change was to spend money unnecessarily, but all voted to remove them rather than enter into a controversy over the matter with the board of health. No new closets will be put in, but outside ones will be fitted up to use.
